Definitions of Service

Domestic Assistance services can provide the following: Workers can prepare meals, do shopping, undertake small errands, and pay bills as required.

Workers can also escort consumers to do shopping and pay bills, or to attend medical and related appointments.

The service undertakes essential house cleaning of areas regularly used by the consumer. These include bathrooms, toilets, kitchens, laundries, living areas and bedrooms.

Personal Care services can provide the following: Workers can assist or perform activities that people would normally do for themselves, but they are unable to perform with our assistance because of illness, disability or frailty. Examples of personal care are bathing, dressing, grooming, toileting, and assistance with getting in and out of bed and assistance with mobility and eating.

Respite Services can provide the following: A break from the caring responsibilities for carers who attend to persons receiving home care packages. They also provide an opportunity for the person being cared for to have a break, or an outing without their usual carer.

Overnight respite can be provided in a consumer's home. The worker sleeps overnight, while being available to respond to a call for assistance. In some instances, the consumer may require regular assistance at night and therefore the worker will not be sleeping for the majority of the time.

Travel Costs

Travel costs may be payable if the client is located more than 30 minutes away from Kooweerup Regional Health Service. This fee is passed on to the staff member attending to cover the cost of using their personal vehicle and to meet award obligations.
